A Change Model for Doctoral to Faculty Diversity in STEM

AGEP-NC Video In STEM for All Video Showcase

Several members of the AGEP-NC Community are featured in a new video about the AGEP-NC project. In this video, members of the Leadership Team Lisa Merriweather, Winsor Alexander and Maureen Grasso describe the goals and approach of the AGEP-NC model. Fatma Mili, Dean of UNCC's College of Computing and Informatics, explains the power that faculty have to make change, and AGEP-NC Faculty Fellows Brad Taylor and Melanie Simpson describe some of their initiatives to make their departments' doctoral programs more equitable and welcoming to diverse students.

The STEM for All Video Showcase is a great opportunity to network and find new resources. On May 11th – 18th, over 250 projects funded by NSF and other federal agencies will showcase three-minute videos of their innovative work related to improving STEM education.

May 11-18: You are invited to browse and view the 3-minute videos, join in discussions, and vote for your favorites. The STEM for All Video Showcase is a free 8-day virtual event. AGEP-NC PIs Keith Schimmel and Marcia Gumpertz will be available to answer questions. The AGEP-NC video will be live from May 11-18. Go to
